

Attention 7-Eleven workers

Are you getting paid $21.63 per hour?

UNITE is a union for fast food and retail workers in Victoria. We have been approached by a group of 7-Eleven workers who have told us that they are not being paid properly.

Most of these workers are international students and some are being paid as little as $9 per hour! 7-Eleven are breaking the law and we want to make sure that you are paid properly for the work you do.

On behalf of these workers we have called on the Workplace Ombudsman to investigate the employment practices at 7-Eleven. The Ombudsman has ordered 7-Eleven to produce all its employment records and is now conducting a full investigation.

If you are not being paid properly we ask that you let both UNITE and the Workplace Ombudsman know.

You should know that UNITE will not pass your details onto the Workplace Ombudsman without your permission. We understand that many international students are forced to work more than the 20 hours per week because of the low wages they are paid.

UNITE argues that if all international students were being paid the proper rates they would not have to work more than 20 hours.

It is 7-Eleven that is breaking the law by underpaying you. They are the ones who are forcing you to work more than 20 hours per week because you are under financial duress.

UNITE defends the interests of international students and campaigns for the 20 hour rule to be abolished. At the same time we fight for decent wages and conditions for all fast food and retail workers. This is the only solution to improving the lives of international students and all workers.

If you are not being paid $21.63 per hour contact

UNITE Organiser
Anthony Main on 0417368215
or contact the UNITE Office
Phone: 9328 1555
Email: info@unite.org.au
Visit: www.unite.org.au

Attention 7-Eleven workers

Are you getting paid $21.63 per hour?

UNITE is a union for fast food and retail workers in Victoria. We have been approached by a group of 7-Eleven workers who have told us that they are not being paid properly.

Most of these workers are international students and some are being paid as little as $9 per hour! 7-Eleven are breaking the law and we want to make sure that you are paid properly for the work you do.

On behalf of these workers we have called on the Workplace Ombudsman to investigate the employment practices at 7-Eleven. The Ombudsman has ordered 7-Eleven to produce all its employment records and is now conducting a full investigation.

If you are not being paid properly we ask that you let both UNITE and the Workplace Ombudsman know.

You should know that UNITE will not pass your details onto the Workplace Ombudsman without your permission. We understand that many international students are forced to work more than the 20 hours per week because of the low wages they are paid.

UNITE argues that if all international students were being paid the proper rates they would not have to work more than 20 hours.

It is 7-Eleven that is breaking the law by underpaying you. They are the ones who are forcing you to work more than 20 hours per week because you are under financial duress.

UNITE defends the interests of international students and campaigns for the 20 hour rule to be abolished. At the same time we fight for decent wages and conditions for all fast food and retail workers. This is the only solution to improving the lives of international students and all workers.

If you are not being paid $21.63 per hour contact

UNITE Organiser
Anthony Main on 0417368215
or contact the UNITE Office
Phone: 9328 1555
Email: info@unite.org.au
Visit: www.unite.org.au